Missouri Career and Technical Education Occupational Training Opportunities

Programs and Degrees

Area career and technical schools, comprehensive high schools, as well as community colleges, offer CAREER AND TECHNICAL TRAINING PROGRAMS designed to meet the needs of individuals who wish to prepare for entry-level employment, self-employment, continued career training or retraining. Technical training programs can lead to immediate employment, certificates of mastery, associate degrees, or in many cases, to continued education for baccalaureate degree. Several of the career and technical education programs at the area career and technical schools and comprehensive high schools are articulated to associate of applied science degree programs at community colleges. Degree programs emphasize job skills and include general and applied academic coursework.

In addition to technical training programs, community colleges also offer ACADEMIC AND TRANSFER PROGRAMS specifically designed for students who plan to complete freshmen and sophomore requirements before transferring to a four-year institution to complete a baccalaureate or higher degree.

Programs and degrees vary by institutions throughout the state.

Admission

High school students may enroll in career and technical education programs conducted by the area school, or they may participate in career and technical education courses/programs conducted at their home high school. Transportation to an area school is provided by the home school district.

Adult/postsecondary students may be admitted to the area school if they have a high school diploma or GED. Adult/postsecondary students interested in enrolling in a specific technical training program at an area school should contact the school directly to determine its admission requirements.

Admission to a community college requires a high school diploma or GED. High school juniors and seniors may be admitted through dual enrollment arrangements. Interested students should check with their counselor for details.

Application for admission does not assure acceptance in a particular course or program. Certain programs may have limited enrollment due to staffing and facility constraints, and some courses carry prerequisites.

Cost

Tuition costs are supported by the local school district for high school students who either attend an area school or participate in career and technical education programs housed at their home high schools. High schools students are responsible for tuition and fees charged for postsecondary instruction by community college or four-year institutions.

Cost (cont)

Adult/postsecondary students who attend area schools, community colleges, or four-year colleges/universities pay reasonable tuition, which will vary with each different institution. Adult/postsecondary students are responsible for paying these costs.

Financial Aid

Colleges and area schools offer comprehensive financial aid packages. Several federal and state agencies or private organizations offer financial assistance to help adult and postsecondary students. A few of the more common financial assistance programs include student loans, work study, grants, and scholarships. Contact the Student Financial Aid Office at the institution in which you wish to enroll.
